What's Your Best Piece of Holiday Sanity Advice?

We asked our contributors how they keep their wits about them during the month of merrymaking madness.

"Cooking relaxes me. So I say: Cook more, drink more and don't take everything so seriously."

—Photographer Martin Schoeller (center, in Petra, Jordan, with assistant Michael Wilson, left, and Glamour photo editor Brian Marcus), who shot our Women of the Year—among them, Queen Rania of Jordan—on page 235

"My best piece of advice is to lose yourself in your family and friends at the holiday reunion. Enjoy the truly important things in life. And, oh yeah... eat a lot!"

—20-year-old model Sedene Blake, who stars in "Eight Things to Wear at Eight Tonight," page 258

"Be sure to take some time to take a deep breath and meditate."

—Photographer Patrick Demarchelier, who shot "Eight Things to Wear at Eight Tonight," page 258

"Keep music on—holiday tunes, classical piano, punk rock, seamp romp, whatever. Music transcends."

—Kelly Corrigan, whose second book, Lift, debuted at number two on the New York Times best-seller list, and who writes about failure on page 284

"Always make sure you have one non-family member in the house, because it's a surefire way to keep the craziness in check."

—Jonathan Adler, designer and author of the Happy Chic book line, who curated our holiday gift guide, page 289

"After years of trying to cram in every possible holiday event, I've learned to allow time to simply enjoy my family. Overscheduling leads to disappointment."

—Charlaine Harris, whose Sookie Stackhouse novels are the basis for HBO's True Blood (costarring Sam Trammell, whom she appears with here). Her short story (with evil elves!) starts on page 212.
