New York's Jewish Museum has launched its first curated collection of contemporary Judaica just in time for Hanukkah. In addition to Jonathan Adler's colorful dreidels in ceramic or enameled steel,

Design Edition JM's 43 items include menorahs by Karim Rashid and Richard Meier, candlesticks by Adam Tihany, a seder plate by Lella Vignelli, and an Alessi-produced mezuzah by Dror Benshetrit.

As the Universal Design Studio, Edward Barber and Jay Osgerby of BarberOsgerby have expanded beyond furniture, to interiors and architecture, and beyond London, to Melbourne. Among the many Australian commissions that office has handled since opening two years ago is the pottery manufacturer Mud's first bricks-and-mortar shop. Since Mud also happens to be the country's exclusive distributor of Vitsoe shelving, most of the handmade tableware is displayed on floor-to-ceiling Vitsoe shelving.
