MAKING ENDS MEET

Susan Bradley is an English designer with a whimsical sense of style. We love her silhouette bookends (found in the gift shop of New York's Morgan Library & Museum), modeled after taxicabs and other architectural icons of New York, such as the Statue of Liberty and the Chrysler Building. New York bookends, $28; SusanBradley.co.uk

POCKET WARMER

In certain nations (we're looking at you, Russia), it's customary to take a tug of something strong before braving the wintry elements. Try partaking from this stylish chrome and stingray leather flask by Armani. The subtle curve will match your body's contours, in case you want to slip something restorative inside your jacket pocket.

Verso flask in shagreen, $635; available at Armani|Casa

Swede Repose

Chilly nights are tough to weather. Luckily, the Swedes know a thing or two about long winters and have hit on the perfect formula to beat those blues. Brighten your bedroom with these toasty Technicolor wool and cotton blankets by Klippan Yllefabrik, a company that's been dyeing, spinning, and weaving textiles in-house for more than 100 years. Moa blanket, $95, and Inez blanket, $125; ScandinaviaHouse.org

PLAIN TIME

The classic mantle clock has been, well, simplified down to its essential elements. This timepiece's smooth white aluminum face and beech plywood will have you constantly watching the clock, in a good way. Really simple clock, $110; MoMAStore.com

DROPS OF LIGHT

Don't cry—let this rounded table lamp from Jonathan Adler do the work for you. Shaped like a clear, translucent droplet, the crystal base is tragically beautiful, with a decadent silk shade resting atop. Claridge tiny teardrop oyster lamp, $195; JonathanAdler.com
