Yes, we did it again! One lucky reader wins Teen Vogue's newest bedding—and a complete room overhaul. Photographed by Adam Friedberg.

HOUSE PROUD

Twelve-year-old Ember in her revamped digs in front of a blown-up print of Teen Vogue's shoot with the cast of Harry Potter, chrome birds by Dormify, and a console by Brocade Home. Ember wears a Jill Stuart dress. The Frye Company boots, $348. Details, see In This Issue.

Technically speaking, there was nothing wrong with Teen Vogue's latest room-makeover winner Ember Larregui's old room—but that's because there was nothing in it. "A bed and a TV stand—that's it," recalls Ember, a seventh-grade honors student from Bayonne, New Jersey. Her sheer lack of stuff—coupled with the fact that Ember's mother wrote a touching entry essay on behalf of her daughter—earned the twelve-year-old the grand prize. "I have the best mom in the world," Ember says.

We have to agree. Teen Vogue tapped Chicago-based duo Lauren Gold and Sasha Adler of Oprah-approved Nate Berkus Associates to turn Ember's bare-bones room into a stylish yet fun space befitting our new bedding sets, Violet Femme and Lilac Hill (available at Bed Bath & Beyond). "We wanted it to feel cool and pulled together," Sasha says.

Also at the top of their agenda? Creating a space that felt personal to Ember, an avid reader and die-hard Harry Potter fan with a thing for the color purple. Thanks to details like a set of Penguin hardcover classics, a grape-hued stool from Chicago's Chiasso, quirky Potter-themed illustrations from L.A.-based artist Nan Lawson, and letter plates from home-goods guru John Derian, the task was complete.

The only problem? "I'm so excited, I won't be able to sleep tonight," Ember said, upon seeing her new digs. At least she'll have a cool new room to toss and turn in. —AMANDA FITZSIMONS

SHELF LIFE

Wall shelves with bright details, like these Ikea versions with a red base, make a room pop. Add on a set of stylish hardcover books for extra impact. Bookworms like Ember will love Penguin's colorful collection of classics.

SELF-REFLECTION

Mirrored furniture can open up a small space. Here, a West Elm console is used as a desk.

SIGN LANGUAGE

Small details can have a big impact. This multicolored needlepoint pillow from Jonathan Adler—which comes in every horoscope sign—makes Teen Vogue's butterfly chair [available at Bed Bath & Beyond] even more fun.
